Ogden, Jan. 13.—League bowling was resumed in Ogden last week. The play during the week developed some exceptionally high scores. Lund, by his clever work, has forged himself to the head of the individual list, where he will likely remain, providing he can keep up the fast pace he has set. The contest from this time on will be largely among the leaders of last season, and should be a pretty one. The individual standing of the players to date is as follows:

New York, Jan. 13.-Fighting may be strictly against the law, but there is more of the National league is not in favor of boxing to be seen around New York these any radical changes in the present basedays than when the Horton law sauctioned bouts with gloves. Of course the quality of the bouts is not as high and their duration much shorter than those of the old days, but, judging from the patronage the New York shows are receiving, the contests satisfy the fight-hungry New York followers of the sport.

The battles are held by athletic clubs, which recently have sprung up like mush-rooms. These hold weekly stags, at which from five to ten three-round goes are put on. Both spectators and fighters must be club members, but it does not require a regent's examination to join one of these organizations. Indeed, many are nominated, passed upon, elected and pay dues within half an hour of the time of their first presentation.

No heavyweight fighters have joined that bouts between the big fellows would attract too much notoriety and might hurt the game. One of the most popular clubs is the Sharkey A. C., Sixty-fourth street and Broadway. The club is named after the famous salior fighter, who is referee for the organization.

Some of the best known of the little men, such as Young Corbett, Abe Attell and others have fought before the New York clubs. Republican High Protectionists Face to Face With a Very Troublesome Situation.

Washington, Jan. 13 .- The revival of sentiment in favor of the enactment of a maximum and minimum tariff to meet any discriminations practiced by foreign overnments against the products of the United States resulted in a conference between senate and house leaders today to determine where such legislation should originate. This becomes an imshould originate. This becomes an important question at this session for the reason that the advocates of such a measure are desirous of having it first considered in the body most likely to accept it. Several members of the house believe the senate would be the more likeit. Several members of the lieve the senate would be the more likely to pass such a measure and that favorable action by that body would have a salutary effect upon opposition in the house.

The precedent brought forward is the meat inspection act of 1890, which authorized the president to suspend importation of products of other countries, making discriminations against those of making discriminations against those of the United States. The purpose of that act is almost identical with the tariff legislation now proposed, although the purpose is attained by different means.

McCleary's Bill.

The maximum and minimum tariff bill, as introduced by Representative McCleary of Minnesota, provides that the minimum tariff shall be the present schedules as fixed by the Dingley act and that the maximum shall be 25 per cent in addition to these rates. The minimum, it is believed, would prohibit any foreign country from competing with countries receiving the minimum rates and only differs from the act of 1890 in this, that one provides for exclusion absolutely and the other through the enforcement of prohibitive schedules against discriminating foreign states.
